JIM NABORS
IN A SPECIAL
THIS WEEK

MONDAY Jack Copher, friendly State Farm agent, explains how a low-cost State Farm Life insurance policy can help little Jimmy Dennett through college. Jimmy asks if State Farm has anything to help him through second grade.

TUESDAY Jack offers fast claim service to a lady who has just converted her garage into a tunnel. The lady promises to drive more carefully next time and her husband promises there won't be a next time.

WEDNESDAY

Invited aboard by a friend who wants to sign up for a low-cost State Farm Boat-owners Policy, Jack misses the boat.

THURSDAY

This morning, one of Jack's policyholders was awakened by a large tree. When Jack assures the man that his low-cost State Farm Homeowners Policy will take care of things in a hurry, everyone feels better. Except the children, who've always wanted a tree house.

FRIDAY

Jack delivers the first check to a couple who bought State Farm Life insurance years ago. Now, with money from their State Farm insurance, they can better afford to do something that neither of them has ever done. Retire.

SATURDAY

Jack tells a prospective policyholder about State Farm's Monthly Pay Plan that makes it easy to pay for State Farm car, home, life and health insurance all with one monthly check. When Jack asks if the man has any questions, he says, "Yes, may I borrow your pen?"

All across the country, State Farm agents provide millions of people with all the insurance protection and service they need, for their lives, their homes and their cars. All at State Farm's well-known rock-bottom rates.

By helping so many people in so many ways, State Farm agents have made us biggest in car and home insurance, and fastest growing of the major life insurers. And, now we've introduced low-cost health insurance too.

There's a State Farm agent near you. And he's there to help you any day of the week.

State Farm is all you need to know about insurance.

JOSEPH FINNIGAN REPORTS:

ABC has a new variety show, What's It All About World?, waiting in the wings for a time slot. Producers SAUL ILSON and ERNEST CHAMBERS, formerly with the SMOTHERS BROTHERS, filmed the pilot, described as "satirical" and "irreverent" . . . STEFANIE POWERS, short-lived Girl from U.N.C.L.E., is coming back as the title character of Paramount's ABC pilot Holly Golightly, which is based on "Breakfast at Tiffany's."

When DANNY THOMAS goes to Florida next year for night-club appearances, chances are he'll wind up on JACKIE GLEASON's show . . . Universal Studios has a series in mind for JOSEPH COTTEN . . . Over at MGM they're filming a two-hour TV movie called "U.M.C." The doctor-type show takes place at the University Medical Center and it may become a series.

20th Century-Fox, which is making Julia, TV's first situation-comedy starring a Negro, has pilot plans for a black drama called Two Twenty Two. It stars LLOYD HAYNES (seen recently as a TV repairman on Julia) as a schoolteacher. DENISE NICHOLAS co-stars . . . Fox is also working on a projected Nanny series featuring an English nursemaid.

ED SULLIVAN takes his Nov. 17 show to Las Vegas, where he'll originate from the new Circus Circus entertainment center. Among the acts to be featured is JOE GERLACH, whose claim to fame is that he dives 60 feet into a wet sponge. Ideal trick for a man who can't swim . . . STEWART GRANGER, now a resident of Switzerland, comes back to Hollywood long enough to take part in a murder conspiracy in "Kill Me Once, Kill Me Twice," a violent-sounding World Premiere movie for NBC.

STEVE ALLEN shouldn't have any trouble with his next role. He's playing himself in DICK VAN DYKE's "Billy Bright" movie with MICHELE LEE and MICKEY ROONEY . . . Remember ROBERT HORTON? He'll star in "Private Eye," an English movie with SEBASTIAN CABOT (Family Affair) and JILL ST. JOHN.

The whole cartoon gang will be there for Mickey Mouse's 40-birthday-celebration special on NBC's Dec. 22 segment of Walt Disney's Wonderful World of Color. Among the old-timers expected are Donald Duck, Horace Horsecollar and Clarabelle Cow. Sort of takes you back, doesn't it? . . . SHIRLEY BASSEY, FLIP WILSON, BOBBIE GENTRY and NOEL HARRISON do "The Spring Thing" special for NBC April 28 . . . HENRY MANCINI, a three-time Oscar music winner, conducts the orchestra for the 41st Academy Award show. GOWER CHAMPION produces and directs the show for TV from the Los Angeles Music Center in 1969 instead of Santa Monica's Civic Auditorium.

Just what are the fringe benefits?

Mrs. Dan Gerber
Mother of Five

All baby cares about is the yummy taste... the interesting textures... the nice comfy feeling that comes after mealtime fun. But there's more to feeding than meets the palate!

Benefits you can't see are deep inside all Gerber® Baby Foods. Vitamins and minerals in the wide array of Gerber Fruits such as Applesauce or Peaches. Protein and iron in Gerber Egg Yolks or Strained and Junior Meats.

100% of Baby's nutritional needs can be provided from the wide Gerber variety—milk formula, juices, cereals, meats, vegetables, fruits. Nourishment that shows itself in strong teeth, strong bones, healthy growth. Gerber your baby... the fringe benefits are great.

■ Along about 300 B.C. a Greek playwright named Menander observed, "Marriage, if one will face the truth, is an evil, but a necessary evil."

This morsel of wisdom went unchallenged for about 2200 years. Then came television, and Menander was amended to read: "Marriage, if one will face the truth, is an evil, but in television it's an unnecessary evil."

■ Which is why there are no husbands in Here's Lucy, Julia, The Ghost and Mrs. Muir, The Big Valley and The Doris Day Show. And which is also why there are no wives for the No. 1 characters in Mayberry R.F.D., My Three Sons, Bonanza, Lancer, Daktari, Will Sonnett and The Beverly Hillbillies. The central figures of all these shows once were married, of course, a fact which serves to legitimize the children; but the spouses have conveniently passed on to leave the field clear for middle-aged romance whenever the spirit moves the writers.

This plethora of widows and widowers—really, it's enough to make an old-fashioned, self-respecting census-taker bust right out laughing—offers a strangely distorted version of the average American home. Indeed, we may have millions of youngsters in this country feeling put upon because they've got to tolerate both a mother and a father while the kids on TV have only one or the other.

■ Actually we suppose the present popularity of truncated families is an improvement over what we used to have—bumbling husbands constantly being straightened out by clever wives. It got so that for a while "husband" and "stupid" were synonymous.

Would it ever be possible to get back to the normal family relationship of Father Knows Best?

■ Or have we progressed too much for that?

Kids think it's treat food

(but it's protein food.)

Chef Boy-Ar-Dee® fools your kids every time. They think they're getting a treat, but they're really getting good solid protein. Just one serving of Chef Boy-Ar-Dee Spaghetti and Meat Balls has more protein than most lunchtime soups or sandwiches. The good taste fools kids every time. And at only about 17¢ a serving, the only thing that adds up is the protein.

(It almost isn't fair to serve it only once a week. So buy two cans.)

THE GHOST AND MRS. MUIR

REVIEW

by Cleveland Amory

This is the season of widows. And, along with the revolutionary Diahann Carroll, the institutionalized Lucille Ball and the redoubtable Doris Day, don't overlook a little girl whose show may well be the sleeper of them all. Her name is Hope Lange, and her story is one which NBC evidently felt might be the answer to all the other shows along these lines you can think of—a dash of Bewitched, a pinch of I Dream of Jeannie and, for good measure, surroundings which make the old Addams Family and The Munsters look as if they had lived in a modern motel. It's the story of a Philadelphia widow who moves with her two young children, her dog and a housekeeper to a long-deserted, haunted house on the New England seashore—one co-inhabited by a salty old sea dog who has no intention of leaving. From the moment the young widow walks in, it is obviously love at first fright; but their love affair is going to be a complicated one, not only because he is a confirmed bachelor, but also because of one seemingly insurmountable obstacle—i.e., that he passed on, if not actually away, some hundred years before she was born.

What this show has going for it is interesting, highly individual, sharply defined characters. Take Miss Lange, to begin with. As Mrs. Muir, a writer, she faces up to her predicament with both verve and nerve; and from the title shot of her running on the beach right to the end of each episode, she is cute without being too cute, and good fun without always trying to be funny. Furthermore, she runs her family firmly but somehow without irreparable damage to her femininity. And although she has what is apparently mandatory in TV these days—two devastating children—she somehow manages to manage them, instead of vice versa.

If "refreshing" is the word for Mrs. Muir, "fascinating" is the word for the ghost. And Edward Mulhare plays this part to a fare-thee-well. He is a spirit of the old school (circa 1800), but he can do anything any modern ghost can do—from moving objects to keeping the plot moving—and can also materialize himself at will.

The scenes between these two are as high-grade comedy as anything you are likely to see on your screen this year. In the very first episode Mrs. Muir chides him. "I know you're there," she says. "If you've got anything to say, say it. If there's anything I hate, it's a cowardly ghost." In another episode, she thanks him for giving something back to her. "You're sweet," she says. Now it is his turn to take umbrage. "Madam, if there is one thing I'm not, it's sweet." Interspersed with such scenes, of course, are truly touching ones—indeed so expert are the two principals that they can go in one scene from humor to sentiment without breaking the believability. Finally, don't miss Mrs. Muir's terrific trick dog, Scruffy. Part mutt, part wire-haired terrier, he was bought at the Hollywood dog pound for $7.50. He can be humorous and touching too.

When you catch your husband red-handed...

you've only yourself to blame.

If he's been treating his dry, chapped, overworked hands with your Dermassage, the solution is simple. Buy him his own bottle!

Your husband appreciates the Dermassage way of going about things. No fancy perfumes or flowery scents. Just creamy moisturizers and rich emollients that go to work immediately to smooth, soothe and help heal.

Over 4,000 hospitals use this extra-effective medication for regular patient skin care.

Don't make things rough for your hardworking husband. Give him his just reward... his own bottle of rich, creamy Dermassage.

Soften often with medicated Dermassage Lotion. Or try super-moisturizing Dermassage Skin Cream.

Be sure to watch "The Ghost and Mrs. Muir," Saturdays at 8:30 P.M., N.Y.T. on the NBC television network.

THE MAKING OF A SPECIAL - 1968

RUN-THROUGH

Making specials is rough stuff. Hard work. Toilsome. Seemingly endless. Jim Nabors, the gentleman from Gomer Pyle, U.S.M.C., has a special, "Girlfriends and Nabors," coming up this Thursday (on CBS), and he has with him Carol Burnett, Debbie Reynolds, Vikki Carr and Mary Costa (an opera singer who once sold cars in Chrysler commercials on television). The special-making in this instance was made particularly difficult because Nabors had only a short hiatus from the Pyle set, Miss Burnett was in the process of working on her own show, Miss Reynolds was finishing a movie and Miss Costa was busily skipping around the land fulfilling certain previously arranged commit- →

did some dancing too, having survived the back-flip. But it all seems worth it when they get to the taping (both the dress rehearsal and the final production are taped—sometimes a properly delivered line from the rehearsal can be spliced in for a fluff in the final tape). Debbie dances (above), Vikki Carr sings (beneath the applause sign), Jim and Carol do a take-off of "Die Fledermaus" (above, far right) and then Jim and Mary (at right) do a take-off of "The Barber of Seville." (Mary, a thoroughly trained singer, was somewhat taken aback by Jim's ability.) Finally, Nabors and girl friends get together for a last bow as the special closes. The editing comes next, and editing can do an awful lot for a show; but for the performers it's all over. And glad they are of it.

'I'm irreplaceable'

Howard Cosell insists he has a unique approach to sports

By Joe McGinniss

Howard Cosell is eating lunch at Toots Shor's. He is drinking a vodka martini.

"It's a disgrace," he is saying, his voice staccato and sharp. "It is truly a national disgrace. To spend millions of dollars on baseball stadiums with domes on top while we have men without jobs, children without food or education, families living in rat-infested hovels. I mean it! This is a disgrace."

Howard Cosell is too upset to eat right away. He orders another martini.

It is after lunch and Howard Cosell has just taped a local television spot. He has accused the New York Yankees of dropping a pitcher because of his interest in civil rights and Gene McCarthy politics. At one point, he used the word "saturnine" to describe the Yankee pitching coach. Now, as he rides back to his ABC network office in a cab, someone says, "Saturnine—no one in your audience will know what that word means."

Howard Cosell is slumped back in the cab. "They ought to learn what it means," he says. Suddenly he sits upright, as if realizing he has just said something terribly important.

"I mean it. They ought to learn what it means. It's about time the people who spend their time watching sports on TV and getting so excited about camera angles learned what that word means and what a few other words mean too."

Now it is late afternoon. Howard Cosell has just finished taping his Sunday night radio show, "Speaking of Everything," an interview program he does as a means of getting away from the business of sports, which bores him.

"Any calls, Adrian?"

The girl hands him some slips of paper. There are always calls. He goes into his office, a small, bare room, and puts his head in his hands. Suddenly he sits up straight. The decision has been made.

"To hell with it," Howard Cosell says and reaches for his phone. "I'd like a car in front of the Warwick bar at 5:30."

He stands. "Come on, let's tape a couple of radio spots and go home."

The Cadillac limousine is moving through Central Park. The windows are shut tight, the air conditioning is on strong. Cosell sits in the back, his legs up, his feet resting on a half-folded jump seat. His eyes are closed.

"When I go—and I'm going soon, believe me—there won't be anyone to take my place. The networks wouldn't stand for it. They just can't accept a broadcaster who is not a skill for a product or a team. Believe me, if they had any idea of how big I was going to get, they wouldn't have let me do it either. But now I'm too big. I mean too much to their image.

"I snuck up on them. I simply put my legal training together with standard reportorial techniques and eschewed the entrapment of play-by-play announcing, and suddenly I emerged as a unique and, I fear, irreplaceable, figure in broadcast journalism."

Howard Cosell's eyes are open now and he is staring out the window of the limousine as it moves through Westchester County, taking him home to Pound Ridge, where he lives with his wife and his daughter and two dogs and a swimming pool and acre after acre of woods.

"They say I'm an egotist, and maybe I am. I won't deny it. I wouldn't deny that to you. But no one can say—no one can tell you—that I haven't made a difference in this business."

No, no one can tell you that. No one can say that Howard Cosell, this skinny, pushy, balding, bustling Brooklyn lawyer who walked away from Wall Street 12 years ago because he was bored, has not made a difference in the business of electronically communicating information about sports.

The reason Howard Cosell has made a difference is that only as a side light does he communicate information about sports. What he does mostly is probe people. The people are sports people, yes, but by the time Howard Cosell is finished, the person stands out above whatever it is that he does.

Thus, Cassius Clay—Muhammad Ali, Cosell calls him for the simple reason that Muhammad Ali is now his name—emerges as a troubled, sensitive, sincere young man trying to make his way in a world he cannot understand; a world that turned on him as suddenly and viciously as it had propelled him to fame a few years earlier.

"He talks to me," Cosell says. "He talks to no one else the way he talks to me. And do you know why? Because he trusts me. He knows I care about him. From the first day I met him, he knew I cared about him as a person. I care about all these guys as people, and it is because they know that that they talk to me the way they do."

"Also, they respect me. I ask them tough questions, but they know they are the right questions, and they respect me for asking them."

The first man whom Howard Co- →

sell asked tough questions was Casey Stengel, and when the answers did not satisfy, Cosell went beyond the questions. On pre-and-post-game New York Mets broadcasts, Cosell reported regularly that Stengel had fallen asleep in the dugout. Although the Mets, at the time, were getting rich with an image of futility, they thought this was going too far. Cosell never let up, though, and by the time that season was over, he was a hero among the youth and young adults of New York who were sick of the pap they had been reading and hearing about sports all their lives.

Now, 12 years after he began, Cosell is sports director of the ABC radio network and has reached the top in sports broadcasting. Regular appearances on Frank Reynolds' network news, regular appearances on Wide World of Sports, award-winning specials which he narrates and produces, and an income of about $200,000 a year.

Howard Cosell is standing by the charcoal grill behind his house, a massive steak in his hands.

'Star light! Star bright! First star I've seen tonight. Wish I may, wish I might see an end to in-depth reporting on teen-agers, hippies, sex and pot.'

TV GUIDE

"I know it's ridiculous. Don't you think I know it's ridiculous? To make twice as much money as the President of the United States.

"That's why I'm trying to go beyond. I'm fed up with sports. Baseball is a decaying sport, completely out of tune with the pace of modern society. Pro football is the only one left.

"I tried to buy the Jets, you know. I tried to buy the New York Jets. With two advertising men who are neighbors up here. We didn't quite make it, but we still might. I'd become general manager. Then, of course, I'd quit broadcasting right away.

"Otherwise, I'll give it another couple of years. I've got one daughter married and this younger one with two years of high school left. When she's in college, to hell with it. I won't need the money.

"I'd like to do news; sure I'd like to do news. I could put together a better news program than anything we've got right now, but I've been stigmatized. They say this guy knows nothing but sports. Are they kidding? I could be great with news.

"But if it doesn't happen, then in two years I say good-bye, and I go to a journalism school and teach broadcast journalism. I've had a proposal made already. That's what I'm looking forward to. I've had enough of this. This jungle."

The steak is finished. Howard Cosell takes it off the grill.

"Look at that. Isn't that beautiful? What a beautiful steak."

He carries it inside to where his wife is waiting. She is a lovely woman. They have been married 24 years and still are very much in love.

He stands in his dining area and watches his wife serve the steak.

"I make twice as much money as the President of the United States," he says, speaking softly now for almost the first time all day, "but I am intellectually stultified every day of my life."

He looks sadly toward his feet.

"That," Howard Cosell says, "is the tragedy of my life."

To My Dearest Wife,

Attached please find the official TV Football Guide for the next few months. I think sending you this Guide will be of great benefit to you in your fall-winter-spring social planning (the summer All-Star games will be covered in another letter).

This year's schedule is a dandy. It covers 104 ball games, encompassing 20 weeks of the calendar year. Naturally, these are not all regular-season games; 20 of them are combination Super Bowls, All-Star, play-offs, championship, et al. One other benefit of this schedule is that it lists not only dates but times, which should certainly benefit you in scheduling breakfast, lunch and dinner.

Special reference should be made to the following days: on Thanksgiving, I believe it is essential that you schedule dinner between the half times of the Texas game, which is prior to the kickoff of the always exciting, I am sure you will agree, Washington-Dallas affair. Also, note this year's schedule will be very memorable because it begins on our wedding anniversary; it's a shame it's a night game. However, with St. Louis-Minnesota playing, I am sure you will understand. Since it is such an important occasion in that it has been 12 years since we were married, and I am sure you remember that evening quite well as the White Sox edged Cleveland 3-2, I will forego the post-game interviews, scoreboard and highlight replays. How many other husbands would do this?

Also included on the schedule is a 4-game split on Bill's birthday. I suggest we do one of two things—have the party prior to breakfast or move his birthday to late August. I guess you can work this out.

I know you will be saddened by the fact that there is no game on your birthday. However, TV GUIDE did make mention this week of changing The NFL Today from Sunday to Thursday nights, but of course this is still in the rumor stage.

Say good-by to the kids for me, and always remember, I love you.

Your loving husband,
Donald Wayne Rash

WEBER

Know what it costs to break away from humdrum driving? Nothing.

You might be thinking that a car like our Pontiac LeMans Hardtop Coupe (shown effervescing below) is going to knock your budget off stride. Not so. Because thousands of Pontiac buyers are amazed how Pontiac can build so much more value into a car at very standard-looking prices. Use our LeMans as star witness. The exciting style and the big bucket seats won't remind you of penny-pinching. Looking under that hood won't either (America's strongest OHC Six is standard, but you can order one of two V-8s). As for ride . . . well, who can come close to Wide-Tracking? At any price. Figure it this way. A Pontiac LeMans will let you break away from ho-hum motoring without bending your bank account. So don't wait. Get down to your Pontiac dealer.

'My mother is a very strong lady'

And that's one reason Gail Fisher is now 'Mannix's Girl Friday

By Leslie Raddatz

It may well be that this story should be about Mrs. Ona Fisher, rather than about her daughter Gail, who plays Peggy Fair, Girl Friday to Mannix on CBS this season, and Gail herself would probably be the first to admit it. "My mother is a very strong lady," she says. Somehow, though, it is the Stokely Carmichaels and Rap Browns of this world, rather than the Ona Fishers, who are the ones that get the publicity.

Mrs. Fisher is a handsome, gray-haired woman in her late 60's, who has spent 30 years running a catering business near Plainfield, N.J. After the death of her husband in 1937, when the oldest of her five children was 13, she raised that family by herself, with only one goal: "I always taught them to work and be independent." As a result, today one of those children is a partner in four automobile agencies in various parts of the country, two are prosperous salesmen, one is a nurse, and the aforementioned Gail is an actress who made her way from first Negro cheer leader at Metuchen (N.J.) high school—where she was the only Negro student—to a featured role in a top network television series.

The years in between were not easy, either for Gail or for her mother. "There was always a lot of competition," says Mrs. Fisher. But neither competition nor handicaps seem to have impeded either one. In 1943, when Mrs. Fisher decided to build a home out in the country, wartime priorities prevented her getting needed materials. She wrote to President Roosevelt, received an answer three days later, and 10 days after that had what she wanted.

Gail, although as forthright as her → mother, has sometimes not done so well. As a struggling young actress in New York she worked part-time for a theatrical manager and music publisher named John Levy. At the end of the year he told her to clean out the old files. Instead of moving them to storage files, Gail threw everything away and was promptly fired. But a few years later she and Levy were married. They now live in a three-level home above the Beverly Hills Hotel, complete with tasteful furnishings, swimming pool, bar, pool table and two small daughters, Samara and Jole. After a party or a late night out, Gail likes champagne and orange juice, mixed half and half, for breakfast, and if you've never tried it, don't knock it.

It seems only right somehow that Gail should be living in Beverly Hills. At the time of her father's death, when she was only 2, she said to her grief-stricken mother, "Don't you worry, Mommy. I'll take care of you. I'll build a house in California and feed your chickens." Today Gail says, "I always wanted to be a big movie star and live in Hollywood."

There were, of course, a few stops along the way. Gail took the beauty-contest route to becoming an actress. She was successively Miss Elkdome, Miss Transit, Miss Press Photographer, Miss Essex County and Miss Black New Jersey. The then governor of New Jersey, Robert Meyner, gave her a special award for her "Encouragement of Negro Youth." After she finished high school, she won a two-year scholarship to the American Academy of Dramatic Arts, was chosen for the original training program at Lincoln Center, and studied with Lee Strasberg and Elia Kazan. She appeared in a succession of plays—on and off Broadway and in touring companies of "A Raisin in the Sun," "The Rock Cried Out," "Purlie Victorious," "Susan Slept Here" and "Simply Heavenly." She broke into television first through commercials and The Play of the Week.

Before that, however, she says, "I was forced to struggle for my existence." She worked as a domestic, as a clerk in a stationery store, as a soda jerk, as a manicurist and, as noted, as a not-too-successful part-time secretary. But always there was the driving ambition. Her husband says, "She always knew what she was trying to do and where she was going." Her oldest brother, Ike, says, "We have a family tradition of ambition. We're all aggressive, and Gail is like the rest of us." A friend says, "She's a goer." As for Gail herself, she says, "If you have the ambition, you can do anything. Trials and tribulations make you the person you are. It may take a little longer and be a bit harder, but when you make it, it's that much more worth-while."

The ambition is still there. Gail wrote the lyrics to a hit record, "Mercy, Mercy, Mercy," and her latest song, "Below, Above," has been recorded by Nancy Wilson. She also intends to make an album of her own in what she describes as "a sort of Julie London-Marlene Dietrich voice." Meanwhile, she says her principal ambition is "to be a groovy woman, rather than a groovy actress." Mike Connors, who stars in Mannix, agrees on both points: "That personality hits you right away—she's so alive." Bruce Geller, executive producer of Mannix, says, "Some people flatten out on the screen, and others jump right out at you. Once we saw her, we decided on her immediately. She has an ebullience, a live quality." Gail was chosen from 18 girls, black and white, who tried out for the role. "The part was by no means locked in for a Negro," Geller says; and Gail feels that it is not the token part which some Negro performers and others have characterized as a TV gesture. "I think I'm on there doing a very good job—talented and sexy," she says, but she adds, "I can't take credit for any of it."

Take a bow, Mrs. Ona Fisher.

Are Movies Losing Punch on TV?

Could movies have had it as TV's hottest attraction? It seems unlikely. Yet, why did a first "fast Nielsen" on the new season find not a single prime-time picture in the Top 10? (Last September four movies blossomed in that ratings honor roll.) Network programmers could only stew uneasily and wait for more audience pulse-taking. One thing was sure: some of TV's old stand-bys still had what it takes. In this early Nielsen count, CBS's Monday night powerhouse (Gunsmoke, Lucy, Mayberry R.F.D., The Family Affair and Carol Burnett) trounced NBC's new Monday movie ("The Art of Love") and pushed Rowan and Martin's vaunted Laugh-In into fourth place. The achievement was enough to make an expert weep—NBC had been figured a cinch to be No. 1 network this fall, on the strength of its third night of movies, and here was CBS still on top!

Huntley-Brinkley will add a Saturday edition of NBC's evening news to their present five-day schedule. The new edition will debut Jan. 4 and David Brinkley will begin dividing his time between New York and Washington so he and Chet Huntley can get out of the studio more to cover the news themselves. The weekend newscast will replace the Frank McGee Saturday Report, freeing McGee for other assignments.

The TV programmers have tended in recent years to risk their offbeat ideas more in January than in September. Presumably too much is at stake in the fall, whereas a midseason entry is just designed to pad out a time period until the next fall. The result has been that the so-called Second Season has produced some of the most talked-about TV fare: Batman in 1966, the Smothers Brothers and Rowan and Martin shows in '67. Some other winter starters that have made the grade are It Takes a Thief, The Avengers, Dragnet and Jonathan Winters' show.

So, might the networks be cooking up anything novel for next January? On paper, the most venturesome seems to be NBC's Soul, a black Laugh-In with all-star cast that was booked for a one-shot "preview" Oct. 17. Otherwise, this was what the networks said they most likely would haul up to replace flop shows:

ABC—two musical hours, one with the Lennon Sisters, the other built around British pop singer Tom Jones. Specials are planned as air tests for both series.

CBS—Godfrey Cambridge in either a half-hour situation comedy or an hour comedy-variety show; Glen Campbell and Pat Paulsen in—what else?—their Smothers Brothers summer fill-in show.

NBC—Strange Report, an hour-long whodunit filmed in London starring Anthony Quayle; My Friend Tony, a mystery-comedy with James Whitmore; Flip Wilson as headlined comic in a variety hour. —Richard K. Doan

COMMENTS ON MARVIN

After reading Joan Barthel's interview with Lee Marvin ["He's Way Up on Top, Baby," Sept. 28], it seems to me that he could be ecstatically happily married if he could only figure out a way to animate his mirror.

Your article on Marvin says only six men in his company survived the landing at Iwo Jima and that "later, on Saipan," etc. But the action on Saipan came before Iwo Jima.

THE RIGHT TO EDITORIALIZE

An audience expects only to be entertained when it tunes in an entertainment program. In the case of The Smothers Brothers Comedy Hour, the audience is entertained—but it is also forced to submit to lectures on the political philosophy of the hosts. Thus the hosts take unfair advantage of the audience: they are using an entertainment medium to flout the heretofore-respected right only of the responsible, enlightened journalist to editorialize. Consequently, regardless of the cause or causes they espouse, they are propagandizing.

THE NON-BRITISH BRITISH

If American TV were sincerely interested in reducing the shootings, bludgeonings and other violent deaths in its adventure series, the obvious solution would be to schedule more of those marvelous British series, in which violence is so often circumvented by the sympathetic attitudes of their villains and the superior cunning of their heroes and heroines.

SHOCK TREATMENT (CBS), Friday

In some areas network movies may not be seen on the days indicated.

After the start-of-the-season bonanzas, there are, of course, bound to be network-movie weeks like this, when the known offerings are strictly from stuff and nonsense and the best bet may be a documentary on Sophia Loren, aptly labeled "Sophia," preempting the Wednesday film.

Adventure is the big stuff-and-nonsense item and the biggest, hopefully trimmed for television, is "The Hallelujah Trail," a would-be Western spoof involving stupid cavalymen, dumb-crook Indians and temperance ladies who get lovable when drunk. The actors, among them Burt Lancaster and Lee Remick, were apparently told to play it straight—but straight what nobody bothered to specify. Straight faces (or dead-pans) are maintained too in "Assault on a Queen," no easy task considering the dialogue Rod Serling has supplied for this one. Frank Sinatra's reduced to love-lines like "She's so deep in my gut we breathe together." This is directed at Virna Lisi, the one girl to be scrapped over, in the midst of barnacle scraping by a Sinatra-led gang determined to hijack the Queen Mary via a reconditioned U-boat. The Queen Mary survives; thanks to bad acting, inept direction and the morass of clichés the story doesn't.

The week's third adventure film is "The Satan Bug," shifted from last week, which starts out like a house—or rather a world—afire. Its initial realism is fascinating but then this sci-fi thriller runs out of logic and becomes a sort of All-American James Bond frolic, with some of the games but none of the fun to make its absurdities palatable. And the fourth film is the first of the season's tailored-for-television World Premiere movies, an unknown quantity called "Istanbul Express." Our man Gene Barry's aboard with a number of other governments' agents en route to an auction of a dead scientist's notes.

Mary Ann Mobley, one-time Miss America, is not only among Barry's fellow travelers but she's also on hand with Elvis Presley in "Harum Scarum," an attempted take-off on the Hollywood way with Arabian nights. Miss Mobley is pretty (but Yvonne DeCarlo she's not), Elvis wears a bur-noose (but Valentino he's not), and, as Elvis devotees keep telling me, it's decent, wholesome stuff.

And finally, for those who find mental hospitals real fun farms and insanity just a barrel of laughs, there's "Shock Treatment," which manages with one fell script to reduce psychiatry and movie-making to pure idiocy. What with Roddy McDowall as a lunatic murderer, Stuart Whitman as an actor faking lunacy to find out where McDowall's hidden the loot, and Lauren Bacall as the venal psychiatrist who's after the loot herself, it's strictly for watching in a strait jacket. "I detest stupid people who think they can fake mental illness," says psychiatrist Bacall. And that goes for movie-makers who think they can exploit it.

That doesn't mean it's the end of the world. Not at all.

Maybe it's for the best. Honestly. Weren't you dissatisfied with your job anyway? Then consider this a great chance to find yourself a better one.

For every woman:
the second deodorant™ you may need whether you know it or not.

Norforms.®
the internal deodorant, kills germs
to stop feminine odor before it offends.

No woman wants to offend others. That's why she uses an underarm deodorant every day. But internal feminine odor, caused by germs, can be an even more serious problem.

What to use? Douching is time-consuming, awkward, and unpleasant. And doctors may say you shouldn't douche daily. Now, thank goodness, there's something as safe and pleasant to use as your underarm deodorant . . . Norforms, the second deodorant.

Norforms are tiny germicidal suppositories, thoroughly tested by doctors. Norforms spread a powerful germicidal film to kill odor-causing bacteria, stop odor internally.

Use Norforms, the internal deodorant, as often as necessary.

HEMINGWAY'S SPAIN:

A Love Affair

See Spain tonight just as Hemingway immortalized it. Visit with Mrs. Hemingway in Pamplona, where a square is named after "Papa." Jason Robards, Jr. narrates. Rod Steiger is the voice of Hemingway. Brought to you by B. F. Goodrich Company.

An ABC News Special Tonight in Color 9:00

Evening

7 11 13 HEMINGWAY'S SPAIN

SPECIAL COLOR "Hemingway's Spain: A Love Affair," is a look at the country Ernest Hemingway said he loved more than any country except his own. Here is the panorama and the pageant of that land . . . The hard, parched plains and angry mountains; Madrid, Avila, Valencia; the running of the bulls at Pamplona; triumph in the bull ring; the Irati River; and timeless Spaniards with ancient faces that never seem to change. The film unfolds a panorama, but the words of the author give it life in excerpts from . . . "The Sun Also Rises," "For Whom the Bell Tolls" and "Death in the Afternoon." (60 min.)

"The Outcasts" will not be seen.

America's Wonderlands—The National Parks

SPECIAL COLOR America's national parks star in the first of four National Geographic specials planned for this season.

Alexander Scourby narrates as cameras scan 44,000 square miles of our wilderness heritage . . . hell-fire eruptions in Hawaii's Volcanoes National Park; elk herding in Yellowstone; the primordial majesty of Grand Canyon; huge fossils at Dinosaur National Monument; a coral jungle off the Virgin Islands; the timeless grandeur of the giant sequoias; the haunting beauty of the Everglades; and a Navajo reservation in Canyon De Chelly.

Also: an examination of the expanding efforts and problems of the National Park Service . . . providing facilities for a constantly growing number of visitors; protecting the delicate balance of nature that distinguishes a park from a wasteland; and fostering the creation of mini-parks within the cities.

As one double-domed program followed another on BBC-2, faithful viewers found themselves beginning to suffer acute mental indigestion. At last came the final item of that night—and almost every night on the network—Late Night Lineup, a program which often makes its own pointed comments on what has gone before it.

In solemn syllables matching the pedantically humorless mood of the evening, an announcer said Late Night Lineup would devote itself to a demonstration of "the ancient Japanese custom of Pie-Aku." Solemnly its staff interviewers picked up custard pies; solemnly they plastered each other with them.

BBC-2's program planners must have taken the hint, for Late Night Lineup has never had to think up a successor to Pie-Aku. Instead it has been able to get on with an assignment which the BBC's annual report describes as "to encourage at the end of the evening a sense of intelligent participation in the whole concept of television."

There are three networks in Britain. The British Broadcasting Corporation (BBC) operates BBC-1 and BBC-2 with revenue from the $12 annual license fee paid by each set owner. The other network is Independent Television (ITV), financed by commercials. Any American tuning in to prime-time BBC-1 or ITV might fancy he had never left home; U.S. series make up an important part of the evening.

But BBC-2 is different. It was originally conceived as a dream network that would simply try to be as good as it could, consistent with a mass audience, without lowering its standards to snatch viewers from anyone else. After a grim start in the spring of 1964—ratings were abysmal—it added viewers by hewing to the quality line long after sponsored TV would have panicked and jumped on all bandwagons at once. This is still its basic philosophy though, as the first network permitted to broadcast color programs, it has tried to meet some of the needs of BBC-1 and ITV fans who have paid the $800 or so cost for a British color set.

BBC-2 runs only four and a half hours a night (the Postmaster General limits broadcasting time in Britain) and considers all of it prime time. It has been using only a few American shows: Hondo, High Chaparral, Rowan and Martin's Laugh-In, He and She. But

This Show Blasts Its Own Network

Britain's 'Late Night Lineup' provides instant—and sometimes devastating—criticism of each evening's programs along with this it has stunningly serialized John Galsworthy's "The Forsyte Saga," Evelyn Waugh's "Sword of Honor," Emile Zola's "Nana" and Henry James' "The Portrait of a Lady." Its regular programs include magazines of the arts and sciences, jazz concerts, close-up studies of music and music makers; and a top class documentary, "Man Alive," which is a trenchant view of humanity.

By Robert Musel

And, of course, there is Late Night Lineup.

Anything designed to prickle minds numbed by meaningless images going in one eye and out the other, anything aimed at reviving taste buds dulled by a night of chewing an endless sausage, must be welcomed if only for good intentions. Any program that will not hesitate to blast shows on its own network and, if the occasion warrants, praise programs on the competing network comes into the category of small miracles these edgy days of the ratings.

Although it has its critics, there is a loyal band who would rather fight than switch it off.

Late Night Lineup is a program about television and the people of television, edited by a former journalist, Rowan Ayers, who says its mission is to try to give its audience at least one thing to remember from a night's viewing. Its method is direct and simple. Ayers chooses the most interesting, important or provocative program of the night—on his own network or the others—and subjects it to close examination while it is still fresh in viewers' minds.

The author may be hauled before the cameras to explain his creative processes, the actors to talk about their roles. Experts in various fields touched on by a program may be asked to watch it and then come to the studio to report their impressions. Ranging freely as it does over the whole field of broadcasting six nights a week, the program is sometimes a critic of television, sometimes a corrector, sometimes a commentator and even an admirer.

The BBC assumed at first that Ayers would confine himself to its own programs, but it was not long before he was examining the competing commercial network. There were → anguished cries that he was "helping the enemy." As in the U.S., British networks rarely admit each other's existence except to argue about ratings.

"They said, 'Hey! What are you doing!'" Ayers remembered. "I was told, 'Be careful you don't start promoting their programs.' But I believe the way to get things done is to do them and show them. We set the ball rolling with 45 or 50 minutes on Independent Television—its programs, advertisements, philosophy. I said it was part of our brief to discuss the whole world of television, and one's just gone ahead and done it, and now it's accepted, and I'm just as pleased and surprised as anybody."

Nor did he limit himself to TV. When BBC radio, for example, interviewed a strip-tease dancer on her life in the grubby clubs of London's Soho district, Late Night Lineup commented that it was ridiculous to talk about something as visual as a strip act. "So we showed a stripper for the benefit of those viewers who might never have seen one," Ayers said. "She stripped all the way. She didn't take off her G-string, though, until she was sitting in a chair."

Ayers is used to shaking up his superiors. He was signed by the BBC to supply ideas for linking spots between programs—trailers for coming shows and so on—and thought up a five-minute letter forum, Points of View, to which viewers were invited to submit critical comments on BBC programs.

"It was the first time the BBC had come under such fire," Ayers said. "Some producers were horrified. They said the BBC should not expose itself to criticism. We made a lot of enemies fast, but we soldiered on, and eventually the program became so popular, producers were annoyed when their shows were not mentioned."

Then Ayers was switched to BBC-2 and Late Night Lineup evolved from an idea for a sort of house magazine. The BBC top brass were apprehensive at first, but with the considerable courage they often show in programming, Ayers was told to keep trying. His 1300th edition was telecast this past summer.

The time slot at the end of the day was chosen so that Late Night Lineup could look back at the programs preceding it. Theoretically it is allotted 20 minutes from the BBC budget of viewing time. "But we are open ended," Ayers said. "Our brief is that if the subject is interesting, we continue."

Let us now proceed to the casualty ward and examine a patient listed as The Rat Patrol, bought from ABC-TV by BBC-1.

BBC-1 took a chance when it bought this American series. There are certain areas of the last war which the British consider their own. One of them is Burma. When a Hollywood film showed Errol Flynn virtually conquering the country single-handed, British critics howled it off the screen. The Western Desert, where thousands of British died before the first Americans arrived, is another sacred precinct.

No use telling the British that The Rat Patrol was only a TV show. A couple of hours after the series premiered on BBC-1, Late Night Lineup had it on the operating table, with two British heroes of the desert war as the surgeons. Sir Fitzroy MacLean, decorated for valor by four nations, and Stephen Hastings, Member of Parliament, were asked how "this comic-operetta jape" squared with their experience.

"I enjoyed it immensely," said Sir Fitzroy, every syllable another twist of the knife. "I thought it was one of the most entertaining short films I've ever seen. I liked the blonde and the bubble gum. I liked the hats they wore. But those were the most convincing parts of it, quite frankly."

After this, predictably, came a deluge of protest from war veterans, patriots, relatives of the dead and those who were simply piqued that Americans → recognized the dramatic potential of the desert campaign and the British did not. The result was inevitable. Michael Peacock, then controller of BBC-1, announced: "The series caused a lot of resentment in Britain. I have, therefore, decided to take it off."

The Rat Patrol lasted only six segments, and the loss to the BBC was estimated at £14,000 ($33,600). This is one of the things that puts Late Night Lineup in a class apart—the courage to attack a show even when it involves an investment by its own parent organization.

The Late Night Lineup critique of The Rat Patrol beat the equally savage onslaught on the American series by the daily-paper critics by several hours and helps explain why Ayers' department does not enjoy the warmest relations with the BBC publicity people.

"They're in the middle between us and the press," Ayers said. "We are in competition with the newspaper critics. They get upstaged some nights, so you can see the dilemma of the publicists. If the critics are inaccurate," he went on, apparently unaware that he was uttering a heresy, "we pick them up. We correct them on errors of fact. On the program!"

Late Night Lineup's close examination of programs often produces unexpected results. On one occasion it discovered that a woman who had earlier in the evening harrowed the nation on BBC-1 with an account of alleged atrocities in Africa was a communist who had gone there to subvert the state, which radically reduced the impact of her story. On another, one of Britain's leading comedy writers thickly confessed (having spent the earlier part of the night at a bar): "I don't think about the bloody viewers when I'm writing."

There is no firm estimate of the size of the Late Night Lineup audience, but its loyalty is high.

'Now I call that a really dirty trick!'

"Once," said Ayers, "we were on the air at 10 minutes to midnight, which is late here. We quoted a joke from a newspaper which had appeared that day. It said: 'Definition of a private conversation—one man interviewing another man on BBC-2.'"

"Well," we said, "maybe this is true, but we are going to do it anyway." All hell broke loose. The switchboard was jammed with phone calls." He glowed with the memory. "I suspect we have friends."

Among them, however, is not TV producer David Susskind. "There's not enough fun or sparks," Susskind said, admitting he spoke from limited experience. "I think they try too hard to steer a middle course. They're too oppressively earnest and serious, and these are the twin sins that can add up to boredom."

The answer there is that the Late Night Lineup team, which includes Joan Bakewell, an erudite housewife with the most bewitching smile on television, consider themselves interviewers, not entertainers. Susskind gave them his idea of how to be both in an appearance on the show. He thought he had been invited to be interviewed by Miss Bakewell. Instead, as the cameras started, he was told he was expected to interview her.

Susskind expertly needed Miss Bakewell on the subject of dominant women until she had trouble keeping her well-bred temper. Said the delighted critic of the Daily Mirror: "Susskind told Bakewell in very outspoken terms what he thought was wrong with her as an interviewer."

"They need more sense of humor," said Susskind modestly.

Ayers got his first name from Lieutenant Rowan, the hero of the short-story classic "A Message to Garcia." Late Night Lineup may have a message of its own for television. END

I took off 60 pounds and kept them off for over 14 years.

By Joanne Folk Chambers—as told to Ruth L. McCarthy

This picture of me was taken about 1951, when I was close to 180 pounds. Believe it or not, I was only 16 years old.

Now look at me, at 122½ pounds. I not only lost that ugly fat, but I've kept my weight down for all these years.

Fat had plagued me from childhood right into high school. In fact, I was so heavy as a youngster that my mother once thought I was deformed.

I remember shopping trips with her. Her mother would point out all the cute dresses in sizes 9 and 10, hoping it would spur me on to reducing. But it never worked.

My father used another tactic. He's Williston's funeral director. And when someone died, Daddy would say: "Heart attack. She was too heavy, Joanne." It made me think. But it didn't make me diet.

By my junior year, I had eaten myself right into the women's half-size dress department. I was nearly 180 pounds! What boy was going to ask me to the prom? This thought, along with a remark from a dermatologist (I had acne, too), finally gave me the incentive I needed. "Joanne," he said, "you have a pretty face. If you'd lose about 60 pounds, you could be Miss America."

Me, a beauty queen? I had a long way to go to make the Pageant, but maybe I could at least get to the senior prom. The question was, how to get rid of those extra pounds.

My mother had never really been stout. But there was a time when she needed to take off about eight pounds. And she did it by taking a reducing-plan candy, containing vitamins and minerals. It was called Ayds. And it worked. Perhaps, I thought, it could help me.

I made an appointment with our family doctor. He had once refused to give me reducing pills, so I didn't want to take anything without checking with him first. He agreed to the Ayds. You see, they don't contain any harmful drugs.

How did I take Ayds? As directed ... one or two before meals with a hot drink. The candy helped me curb my appetite. There was no starving myself. On the Ayds plan, I ate regular meals, but I ate less.

By the time graduation week came, my world was rosy. I was down 50 pounds. Had a date for the prom. Was voted most poised and best personality. And was accepted at the University of South Carolina.

This beauty queen photo of me was taken the day I was crowned "Miss Williston 1954." I weighed about 120 pounds.

College proved even more exciting. The local Jaycees wanted me to enter the Miss Williston Pageant. Was I really thin enough to parade in a bathing suit? I decided to shed more pounds, so I bought some more Ayds at the drugstore and I took them as I had before. The day they crowned me queen, I was about 120 pounds.

In the years to come, I married, moved to Williston, became a mother, and all the while maintained my weight with the Ayds plan. Now, I teach at West Pelzer Elementary School, and always keep some in my desk. If I'm hungry at the 10:45 break, I have an Ayds with a cup of coffee and forget about eating till lunch. They've really been wonderful for me.

When my sister said I ought to tell my story, I laughed at the idea. But then I began to think of the way Ayds had changed my life. And I thought of all the other people my story might help. Then and there, I decided to tell the world how I lost 60 pounds, and have stayed slim for over 14 years.

His midriff has visibly broadened at age 48, despite a determined daily ritual of 20 push-ups and 20 situps before breakfast. Tired eyes peer from the deep hollows of a jowly face, still incongruously thatched by a youthful haircut. A recently diagnosed astigmatism requires him to utilize prescription glasses for reading scripts and referring to the large-faced Odamar Piguet wrist watch by which his manifold activities are regulated.

"I used to be able to accomplish twice as much in a given day," admits Jack Webb, lighting a filter tip from his daily ration of three packs. "I no longer have much spiz left. Age slows me down."

He speaks in the resonant voice, at once phlegmatic and decisive, known to two decades of television viewers who often endow the documentary-coated Dagnet →

Happiness is a return to the good old days

At 48, Jack Webb has turned the trick

By Richard Warren Lewis

series with greater probity than the legitimate police agencies it glorifies. An anachronism in the age of Mc-Luhan, Webb's slick cops-and-robbers format has remained virtually intact since January 1952, when the initial episode wound up with the arms of a blacksmith slamming a Mark VII Ltd. die marker into a slab of softer metal.

Besides starring as dead-pan Sgt. Joe Friday, Webb produced, directed, cast, rewrote and edited most of the teleplays seen during Dragnet's original 278-program life span in the Fifties. The three Emmys awarded the show were a tribute to his versatility as well as his reputation as an innovator. He was the first to bring to the small screen the revealing camera close-up techniques pioneered by D.W. Griffith in motion pictures.

Webb was immortalized on the cover of Time magazine and well on his way to becoming a millionaire by the time he was 33. But only six years later, he found himself facing eclipse. A desperate attempt to revitalize faltering ratings by promoting Friday to a lieutenantcy failed miserably. Dragnet finally expired in 1959. Badge 714, the mythical shield worn by Friday, was respectfully buried in the cornerstone of a new Police Academy classroom building under construction in Los Angeles.

Three subsequent series produced by Webb—Noah's Ark, Pete Kelly's Blues and G.E. True—did not do well. A $50,000 pilot film he created and produced wound up on the cutting-room floor. He developed a distracting peptic disorder, whose only remedy—then and now—is wholesale quantities of Alka-Seltzer kept within easy reach.

Today, 20 years after its 1949 radio debut, the posthumous edition of Dragnet exemplifies a trend reflected in various other elements of contemporary society. "Gone with the Wind" is back in the theaters. Joe DiMaggio has returned to the ball park. And the resilient Dragnet has settled into what apparently will be another lengthy tenure. Love is lovelier the second time around.

The surprising renaissance of Dragnet, 1969—as it is now labeled—illustrates the prescience of several nostalgic executives at Universal Pictures who three years ago recommissioned Dragnet as a quick-dividend, two-hour movie for television. Impressed with the results, Universal temporarily shelved the film in favor of potentially greater profits.

The new skein of half-hour Dragnets, hastily added to the NBC schedule as a midseason replacement in January 1967, offered few surprises. Story lines were streamlined to confront such contemporary issues as LSD, marijuana and racial turbulence, but the staccato dialogue still sounded as though it belonged on the Morton Salt boxes from which Webb learned to read as a child.

Friday was demoted to the rank of sergeant and allied with a new partner, veteran straight man Harry Morgan. "Just give us the facts, ma'am"—the "Would you believe . . .?" of another generation—was restored to its previous status as a regular catch phrase. To accommodate a switch to color, the show's pretentious finale was reshot. The arms of the blacksmith now were those of the protean Webb.

Forty episodes later, just before production for the fall season was ready to resume last June, he settled into a swivel chair in his three-room suite at the Universal City Studios in North Hollywood. His usual hangdog visage had lately assumed an uncanny resemblance to the physiognomy of one of his pets, a harlequin Great Dane guilelessly named Friday.

A framed color photograph of the 190-pound animal occupied a preferred position adjacent to its master's L-shaped desk, only several yards distant from a miniature American flag. Wearing a monogrammed sport shirt and alpaca sweater, Webb leaned back and fondled the catechism of his calling—a blue-and-white ratings brochure delivered semimonthly.

"We're 14th in the latest Nielsen book," he exulted last spring, grinding out his cigarette in an ashtray presented to him by the U.S. Marine Corps for past accomplishments. "A couple of weeks ago we were the eighth show in the country. Ratings are like checking accounts. We're happy to have them high and we don't believe them when they're low."

For Webb, happiness meant a return to the good old days. With obvious relish, he maneuvered around the lot in an electric golf cart emblazoned with an "SGT 714" license plate, fielded phone calls on office extension 714 and offered visitors miniature replicas of Badge 714—along with helpings of homily and hyperbole befitting his stature.

"The timing was right in putting Dragnet back on the air," he explained.

"It's almost as if people were looking for this type of program. Judging by our ratings and our mail, there must be an enormous segment of the public which believes it's time that policemen no longer be misunderstood and maligned."

Tangible proof was the stacks of correspondence piled near a wall decorated with Treasury Department steel engravings of the 35 American Presidents. Fittingly, the mail contained a request for a kinescope from Dwight D. Eisenhower's military aide. The former President was eager to view a past program dealing with a group of juveniles who decided to establish their own country on an island off the Pacific Coast.

Many of the letters praised Webb for an impassioned, three-minute monologue concerning the problems facing a rookie patrolman made by Friday on one of last year's shows. Later entitled "What Is a Cop?" →

Tests By Doctors Prove It Possible To Shrink Painful Hemorrhoids

And Promptly Stop The Itching, Relieve Pain In Most Cases.

A scientific research institute has discovered a medication which has the ability, in most cases — to actually shrink hemorrhoids and to promptly stop the burning itch and relieve pain.

In case after case, the sufferer first notices relief from itching and pain. Then painful swelling of the inflamed hemorrhoids is gently reduced.

Tests conducted on hundreds of patients by doctors in New York City, in Washington, D.C. and at a Midwest Medical Center proved this so.

The secret is Preparation H[®]. There is no other formula for the treatment of hemorrhoids like Preparation H. In addition to actually shrinking hemorrhoids — Preparation H lubricates, soothes irritated tissues and helps prevent further infection.

Just ask for Preparation H Ointment or Preparation H Suppositories. No prescription is needed.

the recitation was introduced into the Congressional Record by one senator and four representatives.

Mail reaction of a different nature protested the use of so-called "profanity" in the early segments of the new series. To add more realism, Webb had lapsed into such on-camera expletives as: "That's a hell of a note!" and "It's a damn good thing you didn't!"

Those remarks seemed excessively graphic to more than a thousand writers of cards and letters who threatened to boycott the show if such language persisted. Four-letter words more controversial than "love" or "flag" were excised following the fifth show.

Virtually every piece of fan mail received in the offices of Mark VII Ltd., Webb's production company, is Xeroxed and tabulated by scientific methods. The duplication does not end there. Beginning in September, NBC unveiled Adam-12—an ostensibly new police show produced by Webb—which easily could have been dubbed Son of Dragnet.

"Television should be a medium of infinite variety," Webb once stated, during the depressing days after the original Dragnet was canceled. "Instead, it is a medium of carbon-copying. It's much worse than it ever was in motion pictures."

No longer the innovator, he now stands guilty of the very repetition he previously castigated. Adam-12 directs itself to the duties of two uniformed patrolmen, while Dragnet focuses on the activities of two plain-clothes detectives. That is the only discernible difference between the two.

Freckle-faced Marty Milner, formerly known for his peripatetic adventures on Route 66, plays a sardonic, eight-year veteran of the force. He shares a black-and-white squad car designated "A-12" with Kent McCord, a callow rookie patrolman blessed with a Dentyne smile and a cleft chin. Their dialogue is replete with the "Yes, ma'am"s treasured by followers of Dragnet, plus the identical underplayed repartee and revelations of off-duty lives that long have been a staple element of its progenitor.

If the public chooses not to bite the same old apples served up by Adam-12, viewers can expect to see television cross-pollination in its most calculated form. Plans are already being formulated for Milner and McCord to uncover a crime, turn it over to Webb and Morgan at the conclusion of an Adam-12 segment and force the audience to await the cliff-hanger solution, and thereby enhance the ratings, on a subsequent Dragnet show.

In typical whirlwind fashion, Webb directed the Adam-12 pilot and also wrote it, using the pseudonym of John Randolph—his actual first and middle names. He claims that modesty prevented him from having "Jack Webb" flash across the screen one more time. To complete an orderly transition from the old guard to the new, Harry Morgan was dragooned to direct several of the succeeding episodes.

Since the sale of the pilot, Webb has edged into the background, content to merely make suggestions for future story developments. Instinctively, he focuses most of his attention on Dragnet—scribbling black felt-pen notations on scripts needing revision and conceiving unusual story angles.

As Webb finds it easier to delegate authority, he spends substantial hours pursuing altruistic endeavors closely related to his Dragnet image. Largely because of personal radio and television endorsements, California voters recently affirmed an otherwise obscure $25,000,000 bond issue which will provide funds for building new police stations and refurbishing existing facilities.

His unmistakable voice can be heard as often as used-car pitchmen, narrating television recruiting propa- → ganda in behalf of the Los Angeles Police Department. During all of 1967, the L.A.P.D. was able to hire only 11 new patrolmen. In the first six months of 1968, since the blitzing of Webb's public service messages, more than 350 rookies have joined the force.

"The voice of Jack Webb and the contributions of Dragnet have been one of the greatest assets to the reputation of the Los Angeles Police Department," said Chief Thomas Reddin at ceremonies held on the Dragnet sound stage last July. On that occasion, Reddin formally presented Webb with his original badge 714, exhumed from the cornerstone of the Police Academy classroom building.

Privately, Webb offers a practical explanation for his extracurricular endeavors. "If you can keep that publicity going and your name in the front part of the paper," he says, "it sure helps you at the box office."

Never known for his reticence, Webb is likely to articulate his most provocative opinions at the end of a workday. He characteristically turns down the dimmer switch in his office, closes the louvered shutters, unlocks a liquor cabinet and pours himself a glass of 80-proof rye and water. At the drop of an ice cube, he pontificates to those assembled on a multitude of subjects. Some items:

- Patriotism: "Flag has become the dirtiest four-letter word in our language. Our world image has shrunk to virtually Lilliputian size because we don't seem to voice pride in flag and country. We seem to have lost all the Cohanisms. We feel our flag is corny, and that's why we're in trouble."
- Violence on television: "When you look at the aggregate of one night's television fare, it's pretty strong, particularly as far as the young viewer is concerned. But let's not put all the blame on the television industry. We would have a little more normalcy in our programming if many of the more violent old movies were eliminated."

- Gun-control legislation: "All weapons should be banned from sale on an interstate basis. All new gun purchases should be registered. Whatever must be done to stem the flow of weapons, we damn well ought to try it. This Nation is bleeding openly and profusely from a valve it never knew it had. If nothing else, regulation will be a significant psychological aid."

- Contemporary society. "There's a hell of a parallel between this generation and the decay of Roman civilization, the absolute crumbling of Pompeii, just before they went under. The very foundations of our culture come from the very people that went under. What makes us think that we are better equipped than they were?"

That rhetorical question remains unanswered as Webb leaves his office, wistfully glancing at silver-framed photographs of the two teen-age daughters borne him by sultry singer Julie London, one of his three ex-wives. Webb has been divorced for four years, the longest matrimonial respite since his 20's.

"What hurts most is that moment when you're shaving by yourself, looking just at you," he sighs, reflecting on the three incompatible marriages that cost him nearly a million dollars in alimony and financial settlements. "But it's always nice to place them back in circulation a little better than you found them."

Barbecued spareribs cooked by a white-jacketed Filipino manservant who once worked for the late aviatrix Amelia Earhart await Webb's arrival at his Early American ranch-style home. He eases into a 1968 Cadillac convertible equipped with a magnetic St. Christopher's medal blessed by the Pope.

"I'm nearing 50, I'm unmarried and my eyesight is failing," he laments, gunning the engine. "Yet I'm not even being referred to as one of television's elder statesmen. I fully expect that to happen within two years." END

NIBBLE YOUR WAY TO BETTER HEALTH

One of the Nation's leading nutritionists prescribes for TV snackers

By Fredrick J. Stare, M.D.

Television is one of the factors that is turning us into a Nation of nibblers. Millions of Americans regularly sit in front of their television sets, munching snacks, making refrigerator forays during commercials and then munching more. Other catalysts to nibbling are the snacks themselves—so good and such a variety.

Is this in defiance of all the rules of good nutrition? Not necessarily. It need not be and it can be turned into a constructive role for better nutrition.

Snacks and nibbles can be good habits. This is possible, that is, if we plan on them and understand that they contribute to our total nutritional needs. Think of it this way. We need in every 24-hour period a certain amount of food energy; that is, calories. The amount depends in large part on how active we are, whether we are trying to lose, gain or maintain our weight. We need a certain amount and quality of protein, and a certain amount of the other 45 to 50 known nutrients such as iron, calcium, fluoride and the other minerals; the various vitamins; the essential fatty acids; and, let us not forget, water. Actually, it is more or → less immaterial when we get these various nutrients as long as we get adequate amounts of them throughout each 24-hour period.

Because of custom and habit, as well as various physiologic, psychologic and practical reasons, most adults divide their eating into three main meals—breakfast, lunch and dinner. Where I grew up, it was breakfast, dinner and supper. As children most of us had these three meals plus a good bit of in-between eating and, of course, as infants we started out with something about every two hours or whenever we set up a squawk.

Eating between meals is now a pretty well-established custom and actually has been encouraged by such procedures as midmorning milk and cookies for school children, coffee and a Danish for the office worker, and a midmorning sandwich for the factory worker. A few years ago studies among factory workers in Oslo, Norway, showed that a sandwich in midmorning appreciably improved work output. These studies did a lot to accelerate in-plant feedings during midmorning.

Unfortunately, snacking does not always improve the nutritional qualities of a poor diet. It is estimated that as much as 10 to 15 percent of a person's calorie needs are supplied by nibbles. This is of considerable importance, particularly for weight watchers and for youngsters.

Poorly planned and unevenly spaced meals often cause the amount of between-meal eating to be increased. However, if done properly, snacking can be put to good use. Sensible snacks, properly timed, can help allay fatigue and emotional upsets in young children. Some youngsters simply cannot eat all they need in three meals. Four or five small meals a day that are eaten will be more likely to provide the essentials of good nutrition than two or three large ones that are only partially eaten.

And what kinds of food provide good nutrition? Foods in variety: dairy products of milk, cheese and ice cream; meats, fish and poultry; cereals of all kinds; fruits and vegetables of different shapes and colors. Variety among these four major food classes (the Basic Four), but portions approaching snack size rather than dinner size, will almost surely provide good nutrition.

For the person who needs to gain weight, snacks and nibbles may help solve the problem. Extra calories can be sneaked in without interfering with mealtimes. In this case it is important to space the snacks so they are not too close to mealtime. They should come nearer to the last meal rather than to the next meal. Also, a fairly substantial bedtime snack can help put on the necessary pounds.

Even if you weigh too much, you can have snacks. Some people find it easier to stay on a reduced calorie intake if the pattern is planned to include between-meal and bedtime snacks. They help control hunger and provide the satisfaction one gets from eating. These nibbles must be part of your diet. They should come shortly before a meal to dull your appetite. They are not something extra taken in addition to a meal but are really a part of the meal, eaten earlier. For example, if you have a glass of milk and a sandwich for lunch, have half the sandwich or the glass of milk 30 to 45 minutes before lunch. If for dinner you have soup or a shrimp cocktail, have it 30 to 45 minutes before dinner. These then are "snacks"; they will take the edge off your appetite for lunch and dinner and you will be satisfied with less lunch or dinner. And save the dinner dessert for a bedtime TV snack.

Good foods for snacks are ones that add to the essential nutrient value of the diet. They are planned for and are a part of your diet. We like to think of them as "scientific" nibbles, in contrast to "common" ones. Common nibbles are extras. They are in addition to your regular diet. A good rule is to choose your snacks from the "Basic Four" food groups and from the foods you would consume at mealtime.

If you like, eat snacks and enjoy them. They play an important part in our social as well as our nutritional customs. Just be aware of them. Examine your snack habits. Are they the proper ones for you? Nutritious snacks include: nuts, cheese and crackers, a glass of milk, ice cream, potato or corn chips, cookies—and with these foods a soft drink, glass of beer or highball to give zest and enjoyment to snack time.

Many of us are inclined to snack more than usual during specific times of the year or seasons—holidays, vacations or Sundays. Before you know it, the "special occasion" can become the rule rather than the exception. And when this happens, make the meals smaller to make room for the snacks of the "special occasion."

Yes, there are variations and complications. Still, you can have your fun, and your liquid refreshment, if you just remember one cardinal principle: Cut down, not out. Moderation in food, moderation in drink and moderation in activity: these are three vital keys to health and a good weight.

You need not go to extremes of starvation, and you need not hike 50 miles. You are in for disappointment if you put your faith in fads and magic medicines. Over the years all the fruitless trials of all the disillusioned dieters have proved that where weight is concerned, there is only one good way to lose. That is by food habits and a food pattern planned to last a lifetime. And snacks can be a part of that pattern.

To be effective, a diet must be a permanent design for living and must include all the essential nutrients for health; it must also include foods that an individual likes and enjoys, and that are easily obtained and fit into the budget. The diet must not be punishing.

Fast weight loss by rigid restrictions is useless because the pounds pile up again.

How much is enough has to be determined by an individual and his doctor. But there are definite principles that can be long-term guidelines to a good waistline and a good life line.

1. Make sure that you have a well-rounded, varied diet to provide the minerals, vitamins and protein you need. Every day's meals and snacks should include 1 to 2 glasses of milk (skim or low-fat for fewer calories) or cheese; two servings of meat, fish, poultry or eggs; four servings of fruits and vegetables, of which one should be citrus for vitamin C and one a dark green or yellow vegetable for vitamin A; and four servings of vitamin-B-rich whole-grain or enriched bread.

2. Then watch the luxury foods. This does not refer to cost but to calories, and includes those delicious but disastrous dishes that pile on the pounds: fried and fatty foods, hot rolls and biscuits, sauces, salad dressings, desserts, and even extra bread. Count the soft drinks, beer and cocktails too, and all the accompanying tempting tidbits.

3. Cut corners cleverly. Make your meals and snacks attractive. Avoid skipping or skimping some meals, which leads to overeating at others.

4. Beware of too much relaxation and too much rigidity. Small indulgences can pack a big calorie wallop; on the other hand, to err occasionally is not fatal and is human.

So don't feel guilty when snacking during your favorite TV program. Enjoy the snacks and have the good sense and intelligence to make them a part of your 24-hour total intake of food and drink to supply you with the best of nutritional health. END

Dr. Stare is the chairman of the Nutrition Department of the Harvard School of Public Health, the author of a book on nutrition, "Eating for Good Health," and the author of a semiweekly syndicated newspaper column, "Food and Your Health."

One day in late 1963 the phone rang on the sprawling, 28-acre Sebastopol, Cal., ranch of Charles (Sparky) Schulz, creator of the popular comic strip "Peanuts." The voice on the other end of the line belonged to someone Schulz had never heard of. Said his name was Mendelson. Lee Mendelson, hailed from Burlingame, down near San Francisco, and he wanted to make a TV "documentary" on Schulz and his work.

At first Sparky Schulz tended to laugh off this latest attempt, one of dozens he had had from Hollywood, to cash in on everybody's favorite low-pressure comic strip hero, Charlie Brown. But this man didn't hail from Hollywood. Besides, there was something in his tone that inspired confidence. Schulz invited Mendelson over.

Mendelson proved to be a bright, personable young man, then just turned 30, who, when he tired of working in his father's wholesale produce business, had branched off into local TV. He had made a small crack in the big time with a documentary about a day in the life of Willie Mays, the baseball player. While this effort had enjoyed a considerable succès d'estime on NBC television

(Oct. 5, 1963, TV GUIDE), it did not exactly cause the networks to fall all over themselves trying to procure Mendelson's services. They reasoned that the kid got lucky. Besides, anyone who lived and worked in Burlingame, Cal., couldn't be all good.

However, Schulz reasoned differently. He was a baseball nut. He had seen the Willie Mays special and liked it. He liked Mendelson. He liked Mendelson's idea that creative control should remain with the creator. He told Mendelson OK, but as far as the animated sequences were concerned, there was only one man he would consider. That man was Bill Melendez, the big, good-looking, Disney-trained Hollywood animator who had done such a sensitive job on the Charlie Brown commercials for Ford.

Thus began a three-way partnership which was going to upset a lot of accepted notions about what people like, what they don't like and the networks' ability to distinguish between the two. Mendelson made what he now refers to as "the Charlie Brown pilot," actually a "documentary" on Schulz containing Charlie Brown sequences. Armed with the "pilot" and an outline for a series of Charlie Brown animated specials, he set out early in 1964 to make what he imagined would be the easiest sale of his life. "I was sure I had the hottest property in America," he recalls. "When it turned out I couldn't give it away, I thought I must be crazy."

You're a good man, Lee Mendelson

By Dwight Whitney

The biggest names in the industry gave poor Charlie—in true "Peanuts" style—the backs of their corporate hands. The then president of CBS Television, James Aubrey, said he "hated" it. Ed Scherick of ABC was simply "not interested." Ed Friendly at NBC was taken with the idea but couldn't get his programming chief, Mort Werner, to give it a tumble. Eighteen of the top agencies were even more withering in their condemnation. "Too fey," objected one prominent executive. ("I had to look that word up," chuckles Mendelson now.) "Can't animate the characters," proclaimed another. "Too fragile," yet another. "Schulz has never written TV, only comic strips," still another.

"After a year of this," recalls Mendelson, "I began to feel like some kind of criminal or something."

The only person who really liked it was, oddly enough, Dr. Frank Stanton, the august president of CBS, who had heard about the "pilot" and requested that it be run for him. "This is good, and if you keep working, you're going to sell it to somebody," Stanton assured Mendelson.

When Stanton failed to intervene in his own program department, Mendelson and his partners figured they had had it. The networks just didn't dig Charlie Brown; he wasn't a "winner"—which, characteristically speaking, he is not. Schulz thinks that the stone-wall resistance rose out of two things: "They doubted we could transfer to film the quality of the strip. A Charlie Brown film or strip has no 'story'—no beginning, no middle, no end; it's the way I see things, the way things happen in life. That episodic quality bothered them. But mostly I think it was that TV people simply do not realize the impact of the comic strip generally. There are very few mediums as strong, that reach as many people, that have as loyal a following."

The break came in the spring of 1965, when Time magazine ran a cover on Charlie Brown—who is, of course, → really Charlie Schulz. "I think it set 'em thinking a little," Mendelson says. In any event the action started. Mendelson heard from an astute gentleman named John Allen, head of radio-TV for the McCann-Erickson agency, who had seen and liked the documentary. He was looking for a Christmas show for Coca-Cola and he thought Charlie Brown would do just fine.

Thus "A Charlie Brown Christmas" was born. But not without a struggle. Coca-Cola, shopping for air time, chose CBS. A week before the show was to run, a group of CBS vice presidents looked at the finished product for the first time. "And you know," muses Mendelson, "they still predicted disaster."

CBS should have more such disasters. The five Charlie Brown specials shown so far have averaged an incredible 28.5 rating with a whopping 48.3 share of audience. They have ranked first five times, second four times, third twice. By and large the repeats have done as well as or better than the originals. They have won Emmy and Peabody awards. They have made Mendelson rich and Schulz even richer than he already was, and given Melendez a foot up on what has turned out to be the success of a major cartoon talent. Even more important, they have helped to open up the medium a little bit, to show that there is room occasionally for the play of really original imagination.

For Mendelson they opened the doors to all kinds of other activities. When he first approached Willie Mays, who had never heard of him either, he used that admirably direct method of calling him on the phone. Now he did the same with John Steinbeck. "People said, 'Oh, he won't talk to you.' He had had a couple of bad experiences with TV. But it turned out we had both picked lettuce in the Salinas Valley and we'd both gone to Stanford. And I was crazy about 'America and the Americans.'"

His show, titled "America and Americans," was, true to Mendelson pattern, turned down by two networks. NBC finally took it. It won an Emmy. Says advertising man John Allen: "Lee has that marvelous ability to get things done. Just ask Steinbeck."

Curiously, even with the success of "Travels with Charley" (which followed hard on "America and Americans"), "The Fabulous Funnies" and half a dozen other projects bearing the stamp of Lee's undoubted organizational genius, the industry still retains its doubts about this alarmingly unorthodox outsider. Little matter that at the present time Mendelson Productions, Inc. has some $3,000,000 worth of production going, including the first Charlie Brown movie, which will cost $1,250,000 and for which Sparky Schulz will do the script. "It's like wild," Mendelson marveled recently. "After all this, I have yet to have any network or agency call me directly and say, 'Lee, baby, what have you got in the works?'"

The answer to that question would be "Plenty." He still operates out of one half of an old house in Burlingame that looks like a real-estate office, lives with his wife and two children in a modest $58,000 (no swimming pool) house in nearby Hillsborough, refuses to go the Hollywood route, or even hire that slick Hollywood PR man to make his image more closely conform with every other hotshot who ever came down the pike. "Lee is just Lee," says a friend. "That's the beautiful thing about him."

Perhaps one day soon the powers-that-be will come into a finer appreciation of that fact. Maybe even this week. This is the week when two Mendelson specials will be on the air: the highly touted "Babar the Elephant" (on which he again collaborates with Melendez); and the repeat on CBS of "It's the Great Pumpkin, Charlie Brown." Not only that but just last week on NBC "The Fabulous Shorts," a pastiche of 17 Oscar-winning shorts in the manner of "The Fabulous Funnies," was presented.

Not bad—considering the kid lives in Burlingame!

NEIL HICKEY REPORTS:

English playwright HUGH LEONARD--"Stephen D" was his most recent effort in this country--is the latest to sign up with CBS Playhouse; he's working on his script now . . . Among the new drama offerings on NET this year are three British productions: CHEKHOV's "The Sea Gull," starring PAMELA BROWN and ROBERT STEPHENS; STRAVINSKY's "The Soldier's Tale," starring dancer-choreographer ROBERT HELPMANN; and "The Mayfly and the Frog," with Sir JOHN GIELGUD.

NBC is after SIDNEY POITIER to star in a projected special . . . Beginning Oct. 28 a new character, Mr. Baxter by name, will turn up at Captain Kangaroo headquarters. Actor and CBS stage-manager JAMES E. WALL landed the role, which deals with "extra-curricular activities" . . . GENE KELLY will do his stuff on a pair of ice skates for PEGGY FLEMING's Nov. 24 special on NBC; RICHARD HARRIS will be there to lend a hand.

Funny You Should Ask is the name of a new ABC daytime game show set to bow at the end of October. LLOYD THAXTON plays host to each week's quota of five celebrity guests . . . On Oct. 27 CBS's The 21st Century examines the rigorous training programs for astronauts, and the following week it will focus on the world of science fiction . . . Actress ANNEKE WILLS signed up with producer NORMAN FELTON for The Strange Report--an NBC "Second Season" venture starring ANTHONY QUAYLE and KAZ GARAS.

By the end of the year, KATE SMITH will have chalked up a record number of television guest appearances, including stints on The Smothers Brothers Comedy Hour (Nov. 10), The Jonathan Winters Show (Nov. 27) and Rowan and Martin's Laugh-In (Dec. 16). And to keep from getting bored, she just recorded an album saluting today's young composers.

Singer LOU RAWLS has the title role in the "Joshua" segment of ABC's The Big Valley . . . WOODY ALLEN stands in for JOHNNY CARSON on Nov. 1 and again on Dec. 9 . . . Television producer-director GEORGE SCHAEFER recently completed a movie called "Pendulum."

ROBERT HOOKS will step aside for his 10-year-old son KEVIN when the youngster makes his TV debut in an upcoming episode of N.Y.P.D. . . . And MARLO THOMAS has invited her sister TERRE to take a turn on her show, That Girl . . . DEAN MARTIN asked his summer helpers, the GOLDDIGGERS, to make a return appearance on his Oct. 31 show.

NBC's The Eternal Light focuses on the Jewish experience in America for a three-part series (beginning Nov. 17) called "New Roots for the Uprooted." One of the programs is a profile of a schoolteacher named MYRA KELLY, who 70 years ago helped her immigrant students adjust to their new country.

You may never take a cold capsule again.

Vicks NyQuil is a new nighttime colds medicine that relieves your major cold symptoms so well, it even helps you get the rest your body needs.

You can take Salem out of the country but...

you can't take the
"country" out of Salem.

Wherever, whenever you light up—Salem gently air-softens every puff for a taste that's country soft, country fresh. Take a puff... it's springtime!
